The Department of Psychology at Occidental College is seeking adjunct faculty members to teach PSYC 321: Developmental Psychology this spring. Lectures will be from 8:30 to 9:25 AM on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Estimated enrollment is 16 students. The course description is as follows: “The study of continuity and change across development. Emphasis on application of research methods to issues related to cognitive emotional personality and social development. The course will focus primarily on these issues in infancy and childhood.”

Occidental is a residential liberal arts college with approximately 1800 undergraduate students located in the Eagle Rock neighborhood of Los Angeles, CA. Our median SAT score of entering freshmen was 1950 this year, and approximately half the student body are students of color. The College is committed to academic excellence in a diverse community and to supporting interdisciplinary and multicultural academic programs that provide a gifted and diverse group of students with an educational experience that prepares them for leadership in a pluralistic world. Women and minorities are strongly encouraged to apply.

Applicants should have their PhD in Psychology or have completed all work for their PhD except for the dissertation.

Please email your application, including a letter of interest, a CV, teaching evaluations (if available), and sample syllabi (if available) to the Department Chair, Andrew Shtulman, at shtulman@oxy.edu. Review of applications will begin immediately.
