The Urban & Environmental Policy Department at Occidental College invites applications for a teacher and scholar at the Assistant Professor level in Urban Policy and Politics, with a focus on Community Organizing, Labor Studies, Urban Political Economy, and/or Public Policy. The position will begin August 2023.

We are interested in candidates who understand urban and environmental problems as deeply linked, and whose research and teaching examine issues of economic and social inequalities, labor and community organizing, and the social, economic, racial, and gender dimensions of workplaces and the labor market. We are interested in candidates whose work considers the role of politics and policymaking at local, state, and national levels, and the challenges faced by policymakers to address existing inequities while also finding sustainable, and democratic solutions to environmental and economic injustice. We seek a scholar who approaches their work through interdisciplinary analysis and considers the role of labor and community organizing as an important response to and strategy to address inequality and to advance social justice.

Occidental faculty are committed teacher-scholars who bring research and creative discovery to life for students in classrooms, labs, studios, and mentored projects. They teach broadly in the curricula of their departments, advise students, carry out research and creative work, and provide departmental, college-wide, and external service. The primary responsibilities of the selected candidate will include the development and teaching of introductory and core courses in the discipline, including courses in your area(s) of specialization. Specific courses that include the introductory level department course (UEP 101), Community Organizing and Leadership, Community Internship/Practicum; and Urban Politics and Policy; the senior comprehensive seminar; and a college-wide first year seminar as well as developing new courses in Labor Studies and Public Policy Analysis. and/or a new course in their own area of expertise. The candidate will also be responsible for producing scholarship commensurate with the requirements for tenure and will be expected to develop a program of research that engages undergraduate students. Incoming faculty will be expected to contribute to and participate in the life and development of the department, advise students, serve on committees, and participate in the broader college and disciplinary communities.

We invite candidates from a range of disciplines, including sociology, political science, social work, social welfare, labor studies, urban planning, geography, applied economics, law, and public policy. In particular, we seek candidates with emphases from a range of disciplines in subfields of: race, gender, and work; urban politics; community organizing; and labor and globalization. Candidates are expected to hold the Ph.D. degree or terminal degree in their field, and must have completed or be completing their doctorate by fall 2023.

We are open to considering non-traditional candidates with extensive professional and community experience as well as a demonstrated record of research and teaching experience but who may not have a Ph.D. or other terminal degree but would prioritize engagement with students while bringing their extensive field experience into the academy.
QUALIFICATIONS

Required Qualifications

- Demonstrated commitment to and excellence in undergraduate teaching. We seek an effective and engaged teacher able to explain the relationships between local and global aspects of our urban problems and how policy practitioners, advocates and researchers, along with government officials, can create practical solutions at the community, local, state, national, and global levels, and teach students to understand and apply ideas about urban politics and political economy, including issues of race, place, poverty, inequality, and policy in the context of a global political economy.
- A strong record of scholarly accomplishments appropriate to the level of appointment or demonstration of applied research and written policy analyses for nontraditional candidates; an existing research program with a plan to integrate undergraduate students into their research.
- Demonstrated experience in a range of practices (advocacy, community organizing, government, community engaged research, and public service) with preference for experience working on how policy and organizing impacts marginalized, low-income, and communities of color.
- Demonstrated experience in working collaboratively with colleagues
- Demonstrated potential for effective integration of technology into instruction
- Demonstrated commitment to working effectively with students from minoritized and marginalized social groups
- Ability to balance excellent teaching, scholarship, and service
- Demonstrated commitment to the four cornerstones of the mission of the College: excellence, equity, community, and service
- Contribution to community engaged teaching and research, a central priority of the College’s strategic plan.

Preferred Qualifications

- Experience working collaboratively with local community organizations
- Industry experience

The Department and College
The Urban and Environmental Policy Department is unique among liberal arts colleges. Many liberal arts colleges have urban studies, public policy, or environmental studies programs. Occidental’s UEP major integrates each of these disciplines into a single interdisciplinary major, one that is uniquely situated in a liberal arts college located in the dynamic city of Los Angeles.

UEP is an interdisciplinary program that has multiple goals for student learning outcomes: critical thinking; writing and speaking skills; recognition and capacity to engage in policy development; knowledge about diverse communities and institutions; and an ability to translate what the students learn into a path for future learning and career development.

Our curriculum includes a heavy emphasis on writing and presentations, a strong focus on original research, including applied and policy-relevant research, community-engaged and client-based projects, and multiple strategies for community engagement, including community engaged research, internship requirements and opportunities in Los Angeles and beyond, and classes geared to providing an understanding of the policy process, with a focus on cities and the process of urbanization.

Oxy’s location in urban Los Angeles sets it apart from other liberal arts colleges, most located outside of cities in more rural or suburban locations. UEP and the College has centered Oxy’s Los Angeles location as critical to its curriculum. Our presence in Los Angeles offers the perfect setting for integrating the study of urban and environmental issues.

Finally, the Urban & Environmental Policy Institute (UEPI), our research, policy, and advocacy institute, mirrors our UEP major as a campus-wide center for community engagement, research, and advocacy. Through private foundation and government grants, UEPI has conducted research, engaged in policy analysis, and participated in advocacy efforts that have made a major difference in Los Angeles and around the country for over 15 years. UEPI has a professional research and program staff who develop programs and initiatives in the community that provide opportunities for all Oxy students to conduct research, study policy, and participate in advocacy. In the past four years more than 350 students from multiple majors across campus have participated in UEPI-funded projects. UEPI staff members bring professional degrees and experience to the classroom and have taught several UEP courses and advised, mentored, and provided research assistance to dozens of Oxy students – both UEP and non-UEP majors. Thus, UEPI has had a significant impact on the College’s mission in terms of both classroom teaching and undergraduate research.
