

Supervisor Meeting Log

Please keep track of the dates that you meet with your project supervisor

Meeting Date #1

include Notes

Monday October 8th 8:30-9:30AM

Discussed potential projects after my experiences this past summer with the URC, my interest in crime and the enlightenment, and she recommended reading Foucault and Beccaria.

Meeting Date #2

include Notes

Friday October 19th 12:00-12:30PM

We had a discussion of Foucault, Beccaria, and began talking about narrowing down my population and time frame. We decided on the eighteenth century but she asked me to think on who would be the best group of "criminals" to study that would be connected to my work on imperialism. As she said, there are lots of types of criminals, and I needed to ground my topic in reality and in history.

Meeting Date #3

include Notes

Thursday October 25th 2:30-3:00PM

We discussed the idea of narrowing my population of study down to vagrancy and the overall arc of my argument for the research. She wanted a clear picture of what I was going to argue, and what I intended on using to make that argument. She also wanted to know the feasibility of me obtaining access to the archives in London and urged me to contact archivists in London.

Meeting Date #4

include Notes

Monday, October 29th 9:00-9:30AM

Continued our discussion of Vagrancy and then she wanted to know exactly how the enlightenment fit into my research. She also sent me to find more concrete secondary sources and to the databases London Lives and the Old Bailey.

Meeting Date #5

include Notes

Wednesday, October 31st 2:45-3:00PM

I returned after our discussion on Monday with some answers to her questions regarding vagrancy and what I had found useful in the databases.

Meeting Date #6

include Notes

Wednesday, November 7th 12:00-12:30PM

I presented what I had learned thus far on the history of crime and punishment in England and what I hoped to gain outside of the databases in London. She was very concerned about what more could be gained outside the extensive databases we had looked into and sent me to find the specific records that I would like to review. I also gave her the notes on my literature review.

Meeting Date #7

include Notes

Monday, November 12th, 9:00-9:30AM

We discussed the comments about my literature review and she gave me some direction as to how to ground my topic and what would be the next steps. I had heard back from one archivist who was happy to help me and we discussed the timeline for turning in my bibliography.

Meeting Date #8

include Notes

Wednesday, November 14th 9:00-9:30PM

We reviewed my bibliography and she gave me some constructive criticism as to how to improve the work and a few more books to look up and review. I told her also about the log of hours and she agreed to what I had recorded so far.

Meeting Date #9

include Notes

Saturday, November 17th, 5:00-5:40PM

After review another draft of my bibliography, we edited it again via phone conference.
