What are some alumni doing now?

Kinesiology is the study of human development, anatomy, physiology and mechanics. The purpose of Kinesiology is to develop and integrate the concepts and principles from each sub-discipline to understand the complexity of the human mind and body. Within each sub-discipline students study stressors, both positive and negative, that govern human performance. In addition, discussions focus on numerous clinical conditions, and the exercise, nutritional and medical techniques used to prevent and control these problems.
