What This Course is About
"Organizing," writes author Si Kahn, "is people working together to get things done." This course focuses primarily on community organizing efforts by people working together to improve their neighborhoods, communities, workplaces, and cities. Community organizing can focus on a wide variety of issues - housing, the environment, public safety, public health and health care, child care, jobs, poverty, discrimination, and many others. We will also focus on union organizing as a complement to community organizing.

The purpose of the course is to help prepare you to be effective leaders. Some of you may want to become professional organizers, but all of you are (and will continue to be) citizens in some community. If you want to be an effective, active citizen who can make a difference in your community, you will need to use the tools of leadership and organization-building.

The course examines the history of community organizing in the United States. It explores the different theories and approaches to effective grassroots organizing. It emphasizes the skills and techniques used to empower people so they can win victories and improve their communities.

Course Requirements
The course is intended to be a small, participatory seminar. Active student participation is critical to its success. The course involves five ways of learning:

1. We will read several books and a number of articles about organizing, including several case studies, and discuss them in class.
2. We will watch several films (including documentaries) and discuss them in class.
3. We will talk with several guest speakers who have experience as effective organizers and activists.
4. We will participate in several hands-on exercises.
5. You will spend at least 12 hours a week working with a community organization in the L.A. area.

You should already have picked one of these groups to work with during the entire term. You will attend meetings and public events, work in the office, meet the staff and members, and undertake research that will help the organization achieve its goals.

Lunchtime Discussions and Films
We've invited several prominent activists, policymakers, and organizers to meet and talk with students for lunchtime discussions (11:30 am to 12:45 pm) immediately following the class. They are listed in the syllabus and at the end of the syllabus. These are all very busy people. Some may have to cancel or reschedule at the last minute, but we will alert you as soon as we know. We will serve lunch. These events are required.

Evening Films with Dinner
We have also scheduled four evenings where we’ll share dinner and watch a film that deals with some aspects of organizing and activism. These will begin at 6 pm and last until about 8 pm. We’ll let you know the location of these dinners later on. The films and dates are listed below.

Grades
Your grade will be based on five things:

1. Your participation in class. Students are expected to do the reading on time, participate in class discussions and exercises, and complete writing assignments on time.

2. Class Exercises. We have developed a series of exercises and assignments throughout the course that you are expected to participate in and, in the case of written exercises, turn in for credit. Completion of these will contribute to your participation in class. They are also key elements of your final paper (see below).

3. Your participation in a community organization internship. Students are expected to be responsible volunteers and complete the tasks assigned to you. Each student should keep a journal about their internship experiences. The journal will be handed in at the end of the term. To evaluate your internship, we will discuss your work with the supervisor and with you.

4. Fossil fuel campaign project. For this assignment all students will participate in the same group project that involves organizing an issue campaign on the Oxy campus focused on fossil fuel disinvestment. Details about this project are at the end of the syllabus.

5. A short paper (15 -20 pages) describing and analyzing your internship and the organization you worked with. The paper should draw on the class materials (readings, films, speakers, exercises) as well as your experiences and your journal. This paper will draw on exercises and assignments throughout the semester explain what you learned about community organizing especially, and how well the organization met the criteria of effective organizing. Some guidelines for your journal and final paper are attached at the end. The paper is due by the date/time set for our class final during Finals Week. We won't accept any late papers.
Required Readings

Much of the course reading will be found in the books listed below. In addition, all readings with an asterisk (*) will be found on the Moodle site this course, which you get by first going to “My Oxy” on the library webpage. We may occasionally add or switch readings if we think it is appropriate.

Students should also regularly bring to class articles from newspapers or magazines that relate to the topics discussed in the course.

You should purchase the following paperback books. They are on sale at the Bookstore.

Mary Beth Rogers, Cold Anger: A Story of Faith and Power Politics

Gabriel Thompson, Calling all Radicals

Recommended Readings

The following paperback books are recommended for basic reference:

Kristin Szakos and Joe Szakos, We Make Change: Community Organizers Talk About What They Do And Why. You will enjoy this book, which has lots of great profiles of and stories about effective organizers working in different parts of the country, in different kinds of organizations, on different issues.

This is the best overview of the history of community organizing. It describes various efforts and strategies to organize communities and neighborhoods in this century.

Saul Alinsky, Rules for Radicals and Reveille for Radicals
Alinsky was the "father" of community organizing, starting in the 1940s. These two books are the "bibles" of organizing -- the lessons he learned from his decades as an organizer. They are both in paperback, easy to read, and full of great insights, most of which have stood the test of time.

Gregory Pierce, Activism That Makes Sense: Congregations and Community Organization
This book discusses the relationship between religious commitment and social activism and describes the role of religious faith in community organizing.

MoveOn.Org, 50 Ways to Love Your Country
This is MoveOn’s guide to political activism and the many ways Americans can be effective citizens

Charlotte Ryan, Prime Time Activism
This book is a handbook for grassroots activists about dealing with the media.
Mark Warren, Dry Bones Rattling
This is case study of effective community organizing around a variety of issues in Texas. It is also an analysis of how community organizing relates to the persistent crisis of American democracy -- inequalities of power, participation, and policymaking.

Rinku Sen, Stir it Up: Lessons in Community Organizing and Advocacy and Makani Themba, Making Policy, Making Change: How Communities are Taking Law into Their Own Hands. These two books document grassroots organizing campaigns that focus on media and policy advocacy; the Themba book focuses on public health issues. She includes a chapter case study on the Community Coalition’s organizing campaign to shut down liquor stores in South Los Angeles.

Joan Minieri and Paul Getsos, Tools for Radical Democracy. How to Organize for Power in your Community
This how-to manual includes: 1) In-depth analysis of how to launch and win a campaign; 2) Tools, worksheets and guidelines for training people to lead their own campaigns and organizations; 3) Insights for using technology effectively, building more powerful alliances, and engaging in the social justice movement.

Web Sites
We hope that all of you will use the internet to connect to the larger worlds of public policy, advocacy, and organizing. There are thousands of web sites that deal with social issues and thousands of advocacy organizations and political networks that have their own web sites. Here are several key sites with which you should be familiar. We encourage you to bookmark them so you can find them easily.

Community Organizing and Development (http://comm-org.wisc.edu) -- This site is a link with hundreds of groups involved in urban community development. If you want to find out what groups are working on different urban issues, this is the site. It also has many articles and reports on urban community development and community organizing.

Organizing Upgrade (www.organizingupgrade.com) is a website developed by former organizers to facilitate strategic thinking on how to link community organizing to broader social justice movements rooted in communities.

Campus Activism (http://www.campusactivism.org/index.php) is a good source of information about organizing efforts on college campuses around different issues. Campus Progress (http://www.campusprogress.org) is one of the most effective progressive student groups, with lots of resources and information on its website. The Workers Rights Consortium
(http://www.workersrights.org) is a human rights group that monitors sweatshop conditions around the world and works with United Students Against Sweatshops (http://usas.org) to help student groups that seek a “sweatshop-free” campus. Another human rights group that deals with issues of child labor, women’s oppression, and sweatshops is the National Labor Committee (http://www.nlcn.org)

American Prospect (http://www.prospect.org), and The Nation (http://www.thenation.com). These are two of the most important magazines analyzing American politics from a progressive, grassroots perspective

Demos - A Network for Ideas and Action (http://www.demos-usa.org/demos); Center for Responsive Politics (http://www.opensecrets.org); Public Campaign (http://www.publiccampaign.org); Good Jobs First (http://www.goodjobsfirst.org); Center on Budget and Policy Priorities (http://www.cbpp.org); California Budget Project (http://www.cbp.org); Campaign for America’s Future (http://www.ourfuture.org) -- These think thanks all provide interesting policy ideas on such issues as tax policy, campaign finance, anti-poverty policy, economic development, citizen participation, housing and homelessness, voting rights, and others
READINGS, FILMS, SPEAKERS, AND DISCUSSION TOPICS

The course will cover the following topics. Students should have reading (and viewing) assignments completed before the class discussion on the topic. Readings with an asterisk will be found on the course Moodle website. We may distribute additional readings during the semester if they seem appropriate and important. (Note: NYT=New York Times; LAT=Los Angeles Times)

Before you begin your internship, you should read “Getting to Know the Placement Site” from the book The Successful Internship: Transformation and Empowerment in Experiential Learning by H. Frederick Sweitzer and Mary A. King (third edition, Thompson-Brooks/Cole Publishers, 2009). It is available on the course Moodle website.

Final Paper

Each student in this course is required to write a short paper (15 pages) describing and analyzing your internship and the organization you worked with. The paper should draw on the class materials (readings, films, speakers, exercises) as well as your experiences and your journal. The paper should explain what you learned about community organizing, especially, what are the key elements of effective community organizing, and how well the organization met these criteria. Two earlier exercises/research projects will help you write your final paper.

1. Keep a journal. As part of this course, you should keep a journal. Your journal should record your internship activities. You should take notes on your observations and impressions about the people, the organization, the community, and issues you are dealing with. You should record your own activities -- including the highlights and problems.

2. Interview a community member/leader within your internship organization. (Due Sept. 24)

3. A preliminary organizational assessment. (Due October 29) This includes.
   a. Annual budget of the organization for each of the past three years. In cases where you might be interning with a union local of a chapter/local office of a statewide organization, you may have to determine local and higher level budgets.
   b. % of budget devoted to community organizing
   c. Number of full-time and part-time staff persons in the whole organization
   d. Number of full-time and part-time staff persons with responsibility for community organizing and advocacy Sources of funding for the organization for each of the past three years, including dues, foundations, fundraisers, other. List the foundations.
   e. List the issues that the community organizing staff have worked on in the past three years
   f. Describe the group’s key organizing campaigns over the past three years, using a narrative version of the Midwest Academy’s strategy chart. Who are their key constituencies, targets, allies? What are their strategies and tactics? List the outcomes of their community organizing campaigns -- victories, defeats, stalemates.
   g. If you organization has a Board of Directors, list the names of the people on the Board of the organization.
   h. Profile the Board of Directors in terms of the following categories: (1) community residents, (2) staff, (3) funders and/or business, (4) allies, (5) attorneys, (6) other
   i. Provide a one-page summary of the organization’s history, including the date of its founding, its evolution over time, any significant changes in its mission or structure

Final Journal

The reflective information from your journal as well as the organizational information you research for your mid-term paper will inform your final paper. Your final paper should aim to be objective. That means you should view the organization from a variety of angles and perspectives -- not simply the perspective of your supervisor. You should look organization from the perspective of the staff, the board, constituents, allies, targets, and others. Then you can come to your own conclusion based on having an "outsider's" view of the organization.

In order to write this paper, in other words, you will need to talk to people besides your intern supervisor. Your analysis of the organization's strengths and weaknesses should be based on the criteria we have discussed and read about in class. To help you think about these issues, we will put on the course website a chapter called “Getting to Know the Placement Site” from the book The Successful Internship: Transformation and Empowerment in Experiential Learning by H. Frederick Sweitzer and Mary A. King (third edition, Thompson-Brooks/Cole Publishers, 2009). Please read this chapter before you begin your internship.

The final paper should include an evaluation of the organization and of your internship. Topics should include (but aren't limited to) the following:

- The history of the organization. How it was started and by whom? Why was it started? How and why it has changed since its beginning? What are the organization's missions and goals?

- How is the organization organized? Discuss its budget, staff, board, and sources of funds. Who runs the organization? How does the way it is organized reflected its missions and goals? How does the way it is funded influence what it does?

- How does the organization decide what issues to get involved with? What is the group's overall strategy? How does it decide on strategy and tactics?

- What is the organization's constituency? How does it determine what its constituency is?

- How does the organization deals with such matters as leadership, recruiting and maintaining members, maintaining morale, fundraising, research, and the media?

- What impact does involvement in the organization have on the people -- staff, leaders, members?

- Discuss how your internship fit into the organization's overall activities. Discuss the specific role(s) you played in the organization. Evaluate the pros and cons of your internship.

Discuss the overall strengths and weaknesses of the organization. Be sure to clarify what criteria you are using.

Fossil Fuel Project
As part of the Community Organizing class, all students will participate in the same group project that involves organizing an issue campaign on the Oxy campus. The idea is to find ways to link students and the college to a major social justice issue that people are organizing around in the broader society. A good example is the 1980s movement to dismantle racial segregation (apartheid) in South Africa, which was eventually successful. College students played an important part in that movement. One of their key strategies was to demand that college and universities end their investments (in their endowments) in corporations that do business in South Africa. At Oxy, this divestment campaign was led by students (including one named Barry Obama) together with faculty. We’ll read articles about the anti-apartheid movement and the divestment movement in class).

Today one of the largest social justice movements is around climate change and global warming. There are many parts of this movement around the world and many strategies for pushing governments, corporations, and consumers to change their practices in order to reduce the serious threat of global warming. Learning a lesson from the anti-apartheid movement, the environmental movement has adopted “divestment” as a key strategy, by urging religious groups, union pension funds, city governments, and universities to end their investments in big fossil fuel corporations. This short Rolling Stone article by Bill McKibben, “Fossil Fuel Resistance,” describes this movement and the powerful organizing emerging across the country.

The fossil fuel divestment movement is growing on college campuses around the country. A number of national organizations are involved in this campaign. The website Go Fossil Free explains the importance of campus-based organizing around this issue:

> Colleges and universities are leading the way. Students have always been key to movements of conscience, and this fight is no different.

> Institutions of higher education are charged with preparing their students for lifetimes of work and service. But if those institutions are invested in fossil fuel companies, then students’ educations are being subsidized by investments that guarantee they won't have much of a planet on which to make use of their degrees.

> Colleges and universities rush to launch greening initiatives, sustainability offices, and environmental curricula, but it makes no sense to green the campus and not the portfolio. Fossil fuel divestment is a reasonable next step -- and it’s the right thing to do.

The same website explains the motivation and goals of a campus divestment movement:

> If it is wrong to wreck the climate, then it is wrong to profit from that wreckage. We believe that educational and religious institutions, city and state governments, and other institutions that serve the public good should divest from fossil fuels.

> We want institutions to immediately freeze any new investment in fossil fuel companies, and divest from direct ownership and any commingled funds that include fossil fuel public equities and corporate bonds within 5 years.

> 200 publicly-traded companies hold the vast majority of the world’s proven coal, oil, and gas reserves. Those are the companies we’re asking our institutions to divest from. Our demands to these companies are simple, because they reflect the stark truth of climate science:

- They need immediately to stop exploring for new hydrocarbons.
- They need to stop lobbying in Washington and state capitols across the country to preserve their special breaks.
- Most importantly, they need to pledge to keep 80% of their current reserves underground forever.

Your group assignment this semester will be to develop an Oxy campaign around this issue. You can learn from the efforts of students at other campus. This how-to guidebook, “Fossil Free: A Campus Guide to Divestment,” provides a great tool-kit for organizing a campus campaign on this issue. Every student in the class should read this document before class begins. Another great source of information is this report, “Everything You Need to Know to Bring Responsible Investment to Your College or University,” published by the Responsible Endowments Coalition. This report is not required reading but it would be useful for you to peruse it so you know what is in there and so you can refer to it for information during the semester.

Whether or not you are excited about this issue, we want you to learn about organizing and leadership by developing a campaign around this topic on campus.

Like any other project or assignment, this one might seem overwhelming at first. But what we hope you will learn this semester, and apply to this assignment, is that effective organizing involves breaking things down into manageable tasks and dividing up the labor so that everyone contributes to the whole. That way, no single person or small group of persons has a big burden. Years ago, the folksinger Woody Guthrie wrote a children’s song about doing tasks around the house. It says: “But if we all work together/It shouldn't take very long.” That’s a great way of describing community organizing.

What do Professor Matsuoka and I expect you to do? No, we don’t expect you to solve the entire global warming crisis in one semester! We do expect you to design a campus campaign around this issue. We expect you to organize yourselves as a group in order to accomplish this task. We won’t be giving you specific tasks or assignments. This is up to you. This probably will involve breaking up into committees to carry out different tasks.

Every student in the class will get the same grade, based on the final products. You will be graded on three things:

1. A memo (roughly 10-12 pages) that outlines the step-by-step strategy for an Oxy-based divestment campaign. We don’t expect you to carry out the entire campaign. In fact, the memo should be designed with a timeline that begins this semester but ends at the end of the Spring 2014 semester. Developing a year-long campaign (even if you may not be able to engage in the campaign in the Spring semester) will lay the groundwork for a longer term campaign on campus that links Oxy to the national movement. The memo should contain an analysis of the issue, campaign goals, the strategy, and tactics you will use, and a campaign timeline. All students (individually or as part of their committees) will be responsible for different sections of the memo. This written memo will be due in November.

2. One tactic that you will undertake this semester as part of that broader strategy. Consult the “Fossil Free: A Campus Guide to Divestment” for examples of tactics. (We will discuss the differences between a “strategy” and a “tactic” in the class this semester). You could, for example, conduct a petition drive, bring a speaker to campus, or show a film to educate fellow students about the issue, hold a rally, or some other tactic.

3. A public presentation of your strategy. The class will give a public presentation of the memo, including a power-point, in November at a time to be determined. The purpose of your presentation will be to engage organizations/individuals to fully implement your campaign strategy. We will discuss which organizations you think should be invited to the presentation. All students will be required to be involved in the presentation. In advance of your presentation you will be required to turn in an outline of the presentation and a list of tasks/areas of work with student names associated with the tasks.

Throughout the semester, you will be learning about various aspects of effective community organizing – such as recruiting people, using media, conducting research, identifying “targets”, and holding them accountable, organizing meetings and rallies. You will see these ideas in action as part of your internships. We want you to apply these ideas to this campus campaign around fossil fuel divestment. And obviously the things you learn through the fossil fuel campaign can be applied to other issues. We won’t expect you to become experts in climate change or corporate investment, but you should learn enough to be able to discuss this issue intelligently with your fellow students and have hands-on experience developing a campaign.
